Hans Sloane

Reading Part 4 (multiple choice)

- Always read the text once for general understanding before you answer any questions.
- After you choose your answer, look at the text to check that the other answers are wrong.

The most important person in the early history of the British Museum wasn't English or Scottish, but an Irish doctor called Hans Sloane. Hans was born in 1660. After he studied in England and France, he worked in London as a doctor. He met many people there.

In 1687 he travelled to Jamaica and learned about its animals and plants. Many years later he wrote books about his adventures in that country. In Jamaica Hans was given drinking chocolate with water. He didn't like it, but when he got back to London, he mixed the chocolate with milk. Hans didn't make much money from his books, but he made a lot from the new milk chocolate drink. Years after his death a company called Cadbury started producing it.

Hans was a good doctor and he enjoyed meeting important people in London, but collecting things was his favourite thing to do. During his life, he collected 71,000 objects: mainly plants and animals, books, coins and medals. Hans wanted these things to be in one place where many different people could look at them.

When Hans died, his family sold the objects to King George II. The king gave them to the British Museum in 1753. Four years later, George II gave his collection of books to the museum, and in 1759 people visited it for the first time.

Tennis and Rafa

a Of course, I'm not one of the best players in the history of the sport. I only play in the summer, and I'm not very good at it. I always play against my best friend from school. He usually wins. I (1) don't have to / must try harder to win!

b But the most interesting thing about a tennis match isn't how long it might be, but how it can change so quickly. You have to think very carefully about what you're doing, and you also (2) have to / don't have to be ready to move very fast. You need to be very fit to play the sport well. You (3) have to / don't have to be very tall, but it can help your serve if you are!

c I enjoy watching lots of different sports, but my favourite sport is tennis. I like it because you never know how long matches will take. Sometimes, players only play for an hour and a half. At other times, they (4) have to / don't have to play for four or five hours. The longest match in tennis history took eleven hours and five minutes!

d But the most interesting players can do more than serve fast. Players like Rafa Nadal – he's my favourite. I like Rafa because he really wants to win, and he works so hard. Rafa teaches people an important message – you (5) have to / mustn't stop trying. I think he is one of the best players in the history of tennis.

Lisa

I travelled around the world by boat just after my twentieth birthday. I felt sad because I didn't see my friends, but I enjoyed being on my own – it gave me time to look at the world around me. My journey was hard work. There were lots of storms. I even had to do work for university. I might write a book about what I did when I'm older.

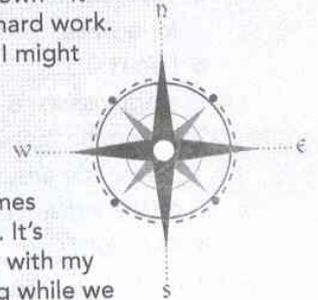

Michael

I climbed Everest when I was nineteen. It wasn't easy! I sometimes thought 'it would be good to stop doing this', but I didn't stop. It's normal to feel tired. I often climb on my own, but I did this one with my dad. We didn't have any problems. I took a break from studying while we were climbing. I didn't miss it! You can read my book about my adventure after I have finished it!

Rod

I have travelled many times with my sister, but after I finished school, I travelled with my friend. We cycled from Portugal to Greece just before my nineteenth birthday. We stopped for a couple of days because I broke my finger, but apart from that nothing went wrong. We didn't have to do any studying because we weren't students. One day I'd like to write a book about the trip.

IRONBRIDGE

a prize-winning area of museums

Reading Part 4 (right, wrong, or doesn't say)

- Look for and highlight the parts of the texts where you think the answers can be found.
- Only choose C if you can't find the information in the text.

In the late 18th century, a man called Abraham Darby III built the world's first iron bridge, across the River Severn in England. He also built houses for his factory workers to live in and he was popular because he paid them more money than other factories did.

Today, the whole area of Ironbridge is a group of ten living museums, where visitors can learn about history and see how things like iron and glass were made 100 years ago. To make Ironbridge seem real, most of its staff dress in 19th-century clothes. Visitors can dress like this

Tourists like to visit the bridge and the old factories, as well as the different houses where people lived. The tables and chairs inside Rosehill House and Dale House were actually used by members of the Darby family, and people usually spend at least an hour looking at everything there. It takes even longer to walk around Blists Hill, which is a complete Victorian town, with an old bank, a sweet shop, a chemist's and several other shops.

5 ● Read the article about Ironbridge, where you can learn about life 100 years ago. Are the sentences 'Right' (A) or 'Wrong' (B)? If there is not enough information to answer 'Right' (A) or 'Wrong' (B), choose 'Doesn't say' (C).
