Transcript

- 1 Last month, I had a school exam, and I was really anxious about it. I studied hard, but I didn't sleep the night before the exam. In the morning, I felt terrible. But my dad said, 'Don't worry – it isn't a really important exam so just do your best.' I felt more relaxed after that, and I wasn't anxious in the exam. The questions were all fine too, and I did really well. So I won't be worried next time.

- 2 I went paintballing with some friends for my brother's birthday. I was doing quite well until I decided to walk through a river. I didn't think it was risky – but the water was moving very quickly, and it was really deep. Then I fell and went under the water. Luckily a friend saw me, and he pulled me out before the river carried me away. It was a really scary experience. I don't think I'll go paintballing again for a long time!
- 3 Last year a TV company filmed some scenes for a period drama in my town, and they were looking for extras. I was so excited because one of my favourite actors was in the film. It wasn't difficult to get a part as an extra, and I was with some of my friends on the day too. We had a really good time, and we earned a lot of money. I didn't see my favourite actor though because he wasn't in the scene that day. I was really sad about that!
- 4 My family and I stayed in a holiday home in the countryside last summer. The weather was terrible, but we played lots of board games and watched some good films. It rained all week, but when we woke up on Sunday morning, there was a flood. There was water in the living room and the kitchen. We got really wet when we tried to save our things! Luckily, it was the last day of our holiday, and all of our things were OK. We felt sorry for the owners of the house, though. It wasn't nice for them. But we were delighted to go back to our own dry house!
- 5 I'm really good at tennis, so last week I applied for a job as a tennis coach for a holiday company. It's for the next summer holidays. I didn't expect to get the job, so I was delighted when I did. They want me to start off working in England this summer, but if they like me, I can work in a different country next year. The company has jobs all over the world. I really want to travel, so it's like a dream come true.

Presenter In the studio today we have Fiona Stratton. Fiona's been around the world, and she's written several travel guides about different countries. We'll hear about those books later, but first, Fiona's going to answer travel questions that listeners have posted on the Teen FM website. Hello, Fiona.

Fiona Hi, Mike.

Presenter So our first question today is from Karen in Cheshire. She wants to know ... Is it OK to change money on the street in Bulgaria?

Fiona Well, Karen, many tourists do this in countries like Bulgaria, but I think you should always change money in a bank. Compared to banks, people on the street may offer more money. But if you change money with a stranger, you may not get the correct money – or even 'real' money. So my advice is, don't do it.

Presenter Great. Now, Emma from Essex is going to Peru before she starts university. She wants to know if it's safe to go to remote places alone.

Fiona OK, Emma. Only go to remote places if you're on a tour. If you're alone, stay in more touristy places. And if you're ever alone in a dark street and you don't feel safe, go towards a well-lit place with lots of people in it, like a shop or restaurant. The people there can help you to call a taxi, for example. It's always better to be safe. Also, many people don't use travel guides, but these guides can tell you which places are dangerous in a city. That's why I think you should always read one before you go somewhere.

Presenter Now, there are a lot of questions on the Teen FM website about how to avoid crimes like muggings when you're travelling.

Fiona Yes – my best advice is to try to look like a local, not like a tourist. Try to find out where you're going before you go there, so you don't have to ask for directions and look at maps on the street. And of course, don't carry lots of money around with you or wear very expensive clothes. You don't want to encourage muggers to attack you.

Presenter Great. Now, Mark from Manchester wants to know ... Is it safer to use a credit card than carrying cash on holiday?

Fiona Well, I think credit cards are much better than cash. If someone steals your credit card, it's difficult for them to use it. The criminal won't know your PIN number, and in most countries you need a PIN number to use a credit card now. Oh, and when you buy something while you're travelling, make sure you work out how much it costs in your currency. Many young people aren't very good at maths. They buy things, and then they're shocked when they get home and their parents show them the credit card bill.

Presenter OK, and the last question today is from Vani, in Cambridge. Is it safe to go camping in France?

Fiona Well, Vani, it's fine to camp in most parts of the world if you use a campsite. But if you go camping on the beach or by the side of a road, for example, it can be dangerous. I wouldn't do that if I didn't know the area really well, unless I was with a local.

Presenter Right, thanks Fiona. Now, about your travel guides. What ...

Presenter Today in the studio we have Dave Bridges.

Dave has organised a competition to find the best young inventor in the country. So Dave, can you tell us a bit more about the competition?

Dave Yes, sure. My friend and I decided to have the competition because we know that young people are great at thinking of amazing ideas for inventions. I've seen some fantastic ideas from people as young as eight years old. We've decided to allow young people aged fourteen to nineteen to enter this year's competition. But next year we're going to allow eight- to thirteen-year-olds to enter too.

Presenter That's great. So what are you looking for?

Dave Ideas, really. Maybe you use a product every day, but you think it could be improved or changed in some way. Or perhaps you've got an idea for something really new – a totally new product. It could be something very simple, like a plastic cover to protect a bike seat from the rain. Or it could be something much more difficult to make, like a solar-powered gadget.

Presenter Great. So how can people enter the competition?

Dave They need to send us a description of their invention – whether it's completely new or an improvement on an old design. We want to know what it is, how they thought of the idea and why they think people would want to use it. They also need to provide a very good drawing of the invention.

Presenter So they don't need to actually make the invention?

Dave They can if they want to. If it's a simple idea, then why not build it? But if you've designed something difficult to make, then it's best to just draw a plan.

Presenter Great. So what happens when people send their designs to you?

Dave The designs will be judged by a team of five adult inventors. There are some really famous inventors taking part. Each adult inventor will choose the idea that he or she likes best. They will then work on the design with the young inventor. Cameras will film them while they are working too. There will be a special documentary on Channel Ten about making the inventions.

Presenter Right. And what will happen after that?

Dave Well, then the final inventions will be made into products. And we hope that they will become popular, sell and make a lot of money!

Presenter So tell me, Dave. What do you think is the best invention from the last twenty years?

Dave Hmm, that's a difficult question. Lots of people say it's the 3D printer, because it allows you to print any object. But I'm more interested in inventions that help people around the world. I think Trevor Bayliss's radio is amazing because it doesn't use electricity or batteries. Poor people in very remote places in Africa are using it right now.

Presenter Great! So have you got any more advice for young people before they enter this competition?

Dave Yes. You need to think of a product that lots of people will want to use. If you can do that, it'll be a great invention!

Presenter Thanks very much, Dave. It's been great to talk to you.
